

Google for Education Certification Exams

25 May 2019

To whom it may concern,

The Google for Education team would like to take this opportunity to celebrate one of your educators; Matt Jacobson, who recently passed the Google Certified Educator Level 2 Exam on 25 May 2019. The GCE Level 2 exam is the capstone certification for Google's ISTE-inspired Professional Development training courses for teachers. The program's goal is to help educators master the technological skills needed to integrate Google tools into the classroom, helping improve teacher efficiency, communication, and student outcomes.

We want to thank you for supporting your teachers and faculty in their professional growth. We know a strong professional development program is vital to any educator's continued success, and we commend you for enabling Matt Jacobson to take the lead in learning how to best apply our tools in your classrooms.

Celebrating milestones is embedded in our culture at Google. We encourage you to share this achievement with other school leaders who may work directly with Matt Jacobson as well.

Congratulations!

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Bram Bout". The signature is written in a cursive, flowing style.

Bram Bout

Director, Google for Education